

COPYRIGHT CLAIMS BOARD

Docket number: 24-CCB-0002

January 12, 2024

Kelly R Eberle

CLAIMANT

v.

Eric Anusewicz, The Custom press

RESPONDENTS

ORDER TO AMEND NONCOMPLIANT CLAIM

The Copyright Claims Board (Board) finds that your claim does not comply with the requirements of the CASE Act and related regulations. The claim cannot move forward unless it is amended.

If you wish to proceed with this claim, you must file an amended claim by February 12, 2023. If you do not, the Board must dismiss your claim without prejudice, although you may file again in the future before the Board or in federal court. If you file an amended claim and it is found compliant, you will be notified and directed to proceed with service. There is no additional filing fee for an amended claim. 17 U.S.C. § 1506(f)(1)(B).

To make your amended claim compliant, you must resolve the issues identified below. 37 C.F.R. § 224.1\(c\)\(2\). You may also choose to correct or edit any errors or other information in your claim before you file it again. You do not need to provide a legal argument in your claim – just a statement of facts and circumstances. Being specific in your description gives the other party and the Board more information about your claim. There is no character limit, so please be as detailed as possible.

Works Infringed — Clarity

To bring an infringement claim, you must provide for each work at issue in the claim the title, author, registration, and work of authorship category. 37 C.F.R. § 222.2(c)(7). In the “Work infringed” section of the claim, you list two works: “Action templates vol 4” and “Elements of style vol 2.” You describe the works as “Collection of vector artwork.” However, you have attached four registration certificates as supplemental materials. Further, a Board search of Copyright Office records shows that registration deposits listed in your claim appear to be catalogs. It appears from your claim that you are alleging that the respondent infringed multiple images; however, it is unclear which specific works were infringed.

To correct this issue, you must clarify which works are subject to your claim by listing each one separately in the “Works infringed” section of the claim. If you are alleging more than one has been infringed, you should provide the title, author, registration number, and work of authorship category for each design that is involved in the claim and provide additional information in the “Describe the infringement” section describing which work(s) in your registration(s) you believe were infringed.

Infringing Activities

You allege that two respondents, Eric Anusewicz and The Custom press, have distributed and reproduced your works. However, your claim does not present facts that clearly state how each respondent used your exclusive rights in the allegedly infringed work without permission. The law treats business entities separately from individuals that may own them. Meaning, “The Custom press” may have its own legal status. Your allegations do not describe any specific acts that it engaged in that violated your rights, or explain the relationship between the two respondents.

Copyright law grants exclusive rights to copyright owners. These include the right to reproduce, distribute, and publicly display the work, and to make a “derivative work,” which is a work based on the original work. Someone who does one of those activities without the copyright owner’s permission may be infringing the copyright, unless they have a legitimate defense. More information about exclusive rights is available on page 3 of the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

When you submit an amended claim, you must more fully explain how each respondent infringed each of your allegedly infringed works. To address this issue, your amended claim must include facts in the “Describe the infringement” section that describe (1) acts infringing your copyrights in the works, specifying the infringing works and how the respondents engaged in the infringing activity, and (2) the infringing acts of each respondent, specifying the allegedly infringed and infringing works for each respondent. You should be as detailed as possible, setting forth what each respondent did in relation to each work you allege was infringed. If you cannot state facts to support an infringement claim about any particular works, or against any named respondents, you must omit them in the amended claim.

Copyright Infringement — Elements

You have brought a copyright infringement claim before the Board. Your claim must make enough factual allegations to support each “element” of the claim. Information about the elements required to assert a claim of copyright infringement is available in the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook. The elements of a copyright infringement claim are:

1. You own a valid copyright in the work, or have been given an exclusive license to the copyright rights at issue in the work,
2. The respondent used one of your exclusive rights in the work without permission,
3. The respondent had access to your work, meaning a reasonable opportunity to view or hear your work, and
4. The respondent’s work is substantially similar to the original elements of expression in your work.

Your claim does not provide enough facts about how the respondent had access to your work and how the respondent’s works are substantially similar to your works. Please provide more details and background regarding this element in your amended claim.

Access

Your claim does not provide facts about how the respondent had access to your works. “Access” means a reasonable opportunity to view or hear your works before the alleged infringement took place. To address this issue, you must file an amended claim with allegations that make access a reasonable possibility, not just hypothetically or theoretically possible. Acceptable allegations of access may include how your works (a) were sent directly to the respondent or a close associate of the respondent; (b) were widely disseminated or was available to the respondent; or (c) are so strikingly similar to the respondent's work that the respondent could not have created it independently. Alternatively, you can upload copies of your works and the allegedly infringing works if they demonstrate that the works are so strikingly similar that they could not have been created independently. If you include copies of the works at issue as supplemental documents, they must be clearly labeled and identified so they can be properly compared to each other.

Substantial Similarity

Your claim also does not include enough facts that explain the similarities between your works and the respondent's allegedly infringing works. If it is not readily apparent from supplemental documents that are submitted with the claim, you must provide some specific allegations about how your work and the allegedly infringing work are similar.

Your claim states that your works are collections of "vector artwork." You separately filed what appears to be a screenshots of the respondent's allegedly infringing use. However, you do not provide any information describing or showing your works. No allegations in the "Describe the infringement" field of the claim describe your works or the allegedly infringing works, or state or show how they are identical or substantially similar. In addition, you have not provided a copy of your works or the allegedly infringed works as supplemental documents. As a result, the claim does not provide enough information to enable the respondent to understand the claim and respond to it. When you submit an amended claim, it must include more factual allegations that support the element of substantial similarity. Please provide more details and background regarding this element in your amended claim, including a clear, detailed statement regarding which portions of your works were taken by the respondent in the allegedly infringing works, or documents that are sufficient to show the similarities. If you include copies of the works at issue as supplemental documents, they must be clearly labeled and identified so they can be properly compared to each other. More information about the elements required to assert a claim of copyright infringement is available in the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

To submit an amended claim, log into your eCCB account and take the following steps:

1. From your dashboard, click the "Amend claim" button and select your docket number from the dropdown list.
2. Your claim will unlock for editing. The information you originally entered will appear in the same order as in your original claim.

3. Make the necessary edits. If you have filed supplemental documents, you must re-upload any documents you wish to include in the amended claim on the “Documentation” page. Please include only documents directly related to your claim, and label them clearly.
4. Once you have completed your edits, continue to click through the fillable claim form until you reach the “Review” page. The Review page includes all the information that you have provided in the claim up to this point. Carefully double-check the information on this page. If you have any corrections, you can select “Edit” to revise any entries necessary. Each section of information has an “Edit” button, which will take you back to that section so you can make changes. After you make changes, you can click “Save & review” to return to the Review page. Please review your claim carefully. Once you submit your amended claim, you will be unable to edit the claim while it is in compliance review.
5. Once you have completed your review and any revisions, you must confirm that the information in your claim is accurate and truthful to the best of your knowledge. To complete the declaration, type your full name into the “Digital signature” box near the bottom of the “Review filing” page and click “Agree & submit.”
