Adrian Meade

CLAIMANT

v.

William E Packer, Behave Productions. Inc.,
Clint Culpepper, Robert E Hardy, II,
Screen Gems, Inc, Part of Sony Pictures Entertainment, Stage 6 Films, Inc.

RESPONDENTS

ORDER TO AMEND NONCOMPLIANT CLAIM

The Copyright Claims Board (Board) finds that your claim does not comply with the requirements of the CASE Act and related regulations. The claim cannot move forward unless it is amended.

If you wish to proceed with this claim, you must file an amended claim by April 18, 2024. If you do not, the Board must dismiss your claim without prejudice, although you may file again in the future before the Board or in federal court. If you file an amended claim and it is found compliant, you will be notified and directed to proceed with service. There is no additional filing fee for an amended claim. 17 U.S.C. § 1506(f)(1)(B).

To make your amended claim compliant, you must resolve the issues identified below. 37 C.F.R. § 224.1\(c\)\(2\). You may also choose to correct or edit any errors or other information in your claim before you file it again. You do not need to provide a legal argument in your claim – just a statement of facts and circumstances. Being specific in your description gives the other party and the Board more information about your claim. There is no character limit, so please be as detailed as possible.

Copyright Infringement — Elements

You have brought a copyright infringement claim before the Board. Your claim must make enough factual allegations to support each “element” of the claim. Information about the elements required to assert a claim of copyright infringement is available in the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook. The elements of a copyright infringement claim are:

1. You own a valid copyright in the work, or have been given an exclusive license to the copyright rights at issue in the work,
2. The respondent used one of your exclusive rights in the work without permission,
3. The respondent had access to your work, meaning a reasonable opportunity to view or hear your work, and
4. The respondent’s work is substantially similar to the original elements of expression in your work.

Your claim does not provide enough facts about each of these elements. Please provide more details and background regarding these elements in your amended claim.

Legal or Beneficial Ownership

Your claim provides conflicting facts about the claimant's status as a legal or beneficial owner of the allegedly infringed work. To bring a copyright infringement claim before the Board, the claimant must be “the legal or beneficial owner of the exclusive right [in a copyrighted work] at the time of the infringement.” 17 U.S.C. § 1504(c)(1). A legal owner is an author of the work who owns the exclusive rights at issue or a person or entity that has received a transfer of those rights, for example, by an assignment or an exclusive license. A beneficial owner is a legal owner who has transferred the rights at issue but retains some of the advantages of ownership, such as the right to receive royalties from the use of the work. A claimant who is not an author or named copyright owner of the allegedly infringed work must provide some specific details or supplemental documents explaining how the claimant owns, or has an exclusive license to use, the exclusive rights at issue.

A claimant asserting an infringement claim who is not an author or named copyright owner in the registration of the allegedly infringed work must state facts that support the claimant's appropriate ownership of the copyright. In your claim, Adrian Meade is not listed as the author or copyright owner of “PAU2573413.” To correct this issue, if Adrian Meade and Adrian Torres (the person identified in the claim as the author and in the registration certificate as the author and copyright claimant) are the same individual, your amended claim must include specific language confirming that they are the same individual. If they are different individuals, you must include additional information about how the claimant owns, or has an exclusive license to use, the exclusive rights at issue. You can do this either by adding facts to the “Describe the infringement” section explaining how the claimant was the owner of exclusive rights in the work at the time of the infringement or by submitting supplemental documents. More information about legal and beneficial ownership is available at page 4 of the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

Infringing Activity — Clarity

Your claim does not present enough facts to clearly state how each respondent used any exclusive rights you have in the allegedly infringed work without permission. Copyright law grants exclusive rights to copyright owners. These include the right to reproduce, distribute, and publicly perform the work, and to make a “derivative work,” which is a work based on the original work. Someone who does one of those activities without the copyright owner's permission may be infringing the copyright, unless they have a legitimate defense. More information about exclusive rights is available on page 3 of the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

You have brought a claim alleging that multiple respondents infringed your work; however, the claim does not include enough information to provide a basis to hold each respondent liable for infringement. In your claim, you state that “I believe that the Rainforest Film founders, Rob Hardy and Will Packer, are still liable for the potential infringement on my screenplay” and “I also believe that Clint Culpepper and Screen Gems are liable for the infringement of my screenplay, as well.” However, you have not included enough facts to show that each respondent personally copied, distributed, performed, or prepared derivative works based on your work, or participated in any such infringing activity.

If you submit an amended claim, you must more fully explain how each respondent infringed your allegedly infringed work. To address this issue, your amended claim must include facts in the “Describe the infringement” section that describe the infringing acts of each respondent. You should be as detailed as possible, setting forth what each respondent did. If you cannot state facts to support an infringement claim about against any named respondents, you must omit them in the amended claim.

Access

Your claim does not provide facts about how the respondents had access to your work. “Access” means a reasonable opportunity to view or hear your work before the alleged infringement took place. In your claim, you state that “I submitted my screenplay synopsis to Rainforest Films in 2001, because I felt that it fit the narrative and brand that they were focused on producing.” Additionally, you filed supplementary documents after your claim that may contain additional evidence. As noted below, these filings will not be considered a part of your claim unless you upload them with your amended claim.

To address this issue, you must file an amended claim with allegations that make access a reasonable possibility, not just hypothetically or theoretically possible. Acceptable allegations of access may include how your work (a) was sent directly to the respondent or a close associate of the respondent; (b) was widely disseminated or was available to the respondent; or (c) is so strikingly similar to the respondent’s work that the respondent could not have created it independently. Not all parties need to have had access to your work, to the extent that they were involved in the infringement of the work with persons who did have access, but your claim must have facts that clearly link the respondents that did have access to the work to the other respondents. Alternatively, you can upload copies of your work and the allegedly infringing work if they demonstrate that the works are so strikingly similar that they could not have been created independently. If you include copies of the works at issue as supplemental documents, they must be clearly labeled and identified so they can be properly compared to each other.

Substantial Similarity

Your claim also does not include enough facts that explain the similarities between your work and the respondent’s allegedly infringing work. If it is not readily apparent from supplemental documents that are submitted with the claim, you must provide some specific allegations about how your work and the allegedly infringing work are similar.

Your claim states that your work is a screenplay about “a young and successful African-American couple.” However, your allegations do not include any comparable information about the respondents’ work, except to state that the motion picture Obsessed starring Beyonce Knowles was released in 2009. It is not sufficient to contend that many similarities exist without specifics. You have not provided enough information to enable the respondent and the Board to understand the nature of the claim.

If you submit an amended claim, it must include more factual allegations that support the element of substantial similarity, for example, by identifying particular scenes and details in the respondents' work that are similar to copyrightable expression in your work, and describing how they are similar. Please provide more details and background regarding this element in your amended claim, including a clear, detailed statement regarding which portions of your work were taken by the respondent in the allegedly infringing work, or documents that are sufficient to show the similarities. It may be helpful to include copies of the works at issue as supplemental documents, but if you provide them they must be clearly labeled and identified so they can be properly compared to each other. More information about the elements required to assert a claim of copyright infringement is available in the Starting an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

Statute of Limitations

In your claim you state that you were aware of the allegedly infringing work when the movie Obsessed was released in 2009. This raises questions about whether the statute of limitations prevents the Board from considering your infringement claim. A "statute of limitations" is a time limit set by law for starting a claim. The statute of limitations period for copyright claims, for both federal court and the Board, is three years after the claim "accrues." 17 U.S.C. §§ 507(b) & 1504(b)(1). Under applicable current law, a claim accrues when the infringement occurs or, if the claimant was not aware of the infringement at the time it occurred, at the time when the claimant knows or reasonably should know that an infringement occurred. In addition, you may not recover damages for acts of infringement that occurred more than three years before you filed your claim with the CCB unless you first knew and reasonably should have known about the infringements within the three years before you filed the claim. In order for your claim to move forward, you must include allegations showing acts of infringement within the past three years.

In your amended claim, please provide the Board additional information in the "Describe the infringement" section about when you discovered the infringement. Please also describe what acts of infringement occurred within three years before you filed your claim with the CCB.

Relief Over Statutory Maximum

It appears that you are seeking a larger damages award than the CCB can grant for this type of claim. If you seek damages in an infringement claim, you can seek either (1) actual damages, and the respondent's profits from the infringement, or (2) statutory damages. You can request both in your claim, but you will need to choose before the Board issues a final determination. Actual damages are money damages awarded based on the proven harm or loss you suffered. An example of actual damages may be the amount of lost sales revenue you experienced. Statutory damages are money damages awarded to a successful claimant within a range set by law, without the need to provide proof of the actual amount of harm or loss. In your claim you state a request for "$27,500 [in] statutory relief." The most that respondents can be ordered to pay in damages (actual or statutory) in a CCB proceeding is $30,000. 17 U.S.C. § 1504(e)(1)(D). However, the maximum amount of statutory damages available from the CCB is $15,000 for each work that was infringed (or $7,500 per work in instances where the copyright was registered both after the infringement started and not within three months of your work's first publication). 17 U.S.C. §§ 1504(e)(1)(A)(ii)(I)-(II).

You also seek payment of an "initiation fee of $2,500 and ... the required documentation/verification for me to become a current membership into the Screenwriters Guild of America – West"; "the 24 writing credits earned for the option to use my screenplay"; and for your screenplay "to be named the original screenplay for the feature film, 'Obsessed.'" However, if the Board rules in your favor, it cannot order the respondent to do anything other than to pay you your actual or statutory damages.

Supplemental Documents and Filings

You uploaded multiple additional filings that seem to include supplementary information after filing your claim. Many of these filings have not and will not be reviewed by the Board or considered a part of your claim unless you upload them with your amended claim using the instructions below. Please make sure that any attachments to your amended claim are relevant to the claim. If you submit an amended claim, please include only documents that directly pertain or relate to the claim, and provide an explanation of their relevance if it is not clear. You may also submit copies of your work and the allegedly infringing motion picture, or its screenplay, as supplemental documents if they are sufficient to show the similarities between the two works. If you include copies of the works at issue as supplemental documents, they must be clearly labeled and identified so they can be properly compared to each other.

To submit an amended claim, log into your eCCB account and take the following steps:

1. From your dashboard, click the "Amend claim" button and select your docket number from the dropdown list.
2. Your claim will unlock for editing. The information you originally entered will appear in the same order as in your original claim.
3. Make the necessary edits. If you have filed supplemental documents, you must re-upload any documents you wish to include in the amended claim on the "Documentation" page. Please include only documents directly related to your claim, and label them clearly.
4. Once you have completed your edits, continue to click through the fillable claim form until you reach the "Review" page. The Review page includes all the information that you have provided in the claim up to this point. Carefully double-check the information on this page. If you have any corrections, you can select "Edit" to revise any entries necessary. Each section of information has an "Edit" button, which will take you back to that section so you can make changes. After you make changes, you can click "Save & review" to return to the Review page. Please review your claim carefully. Once you submit your amended claim, you will be unable to edit the claim while it is in compliance review.
5. Once you have completed your review and any revisions, you must confirm that the information in your claim is accurate and truthful to the best of your knowledge. To complete the declaration, type your full name into the “Digital signature” box near the bottom of the “Review filing” page and click “Agree & submit.”
