Docket number: 23-CCB-0342

October 31, 2023

Charles H. Jones, Jonesin For A Hit LLC

CLAIMANTS

v.

Jasmine N McDuffie

RESPONDENT

ORDER TO AMEND NONCOMPLIANT CLAIM

The Copyright Claims Board finds that your claim does not comply with the requirements of the CASE Act and related regulations. The claim cannot move forward unless it is amended.

If you wish to proceed with this claim, you must file an amended claim by November 30, 2023. If you do not, the Board must dismiss your claim without prejudice, although you may file again in the future before the Board or in federal court. If you file an amended claim and it is found compliant, you will be notified and directed to proceed with service. There is no additional filing fee for an amended claim. 17 U.S.C. § 1506(f)(1)(B).

To make your amended claim compliant, you must resolve the issues identified below. 37 C.F.R. § 224.1\(c\)\(2\). You may also choose to correct or edit any errors or other information in your claim before you file it again. You do not need to provide a legal argument in your claim – just a statement of facts and circumstances. Being specific in your description gives the other party and the Board more information about your claim. There is no character limit, so please be as detailed as possible.

Proper Respondent- Co-owner

Your claim is not compliant because the facts included in the claim indicate that the respondent, Jasmine N McDuffie, is the co-owner of the copyright in the allegedly infringed work, “Letter To My Unborn Child.” That assertion is incompatible with a claim of copyright infringement against the respondent, because an owner or co-owner of a copyright cannot be liable for infringement of that copyright.

In your claim, you state that the work is not registered and provide “1-13047877642” as a service request number for a pending application. A Board search of Copyright Office records shows that Charles H. Jones is listed as sole the author of the sound recording and Jonesin For A Hit LLC as the sole copyright claimant. However, in the “Describe the infringement” of the claim you state that “Claimant sent a track mix with his recorded vocal and music to Respondent for her to record her vocal. After recording her vocal she returned her vocal to respondent to facilitate a mix of the track.” This statement indicates that the sound recording is likely a joint work. Joint works are works “prepared by two or more authors with the intention that their contributions be merged into inseparable or interdependent parts of a unitary whole.” 17 U.S.C. § 101. Here, it appears that the intention at the time of creation was that both sets of vocals be absorbed or combined into an integrated unit. As such, it appears that the respondent is the co-owner of the copyright in the allegedly infringed work and cannot be liable for a claim of copyright infringement.

Additionally, your claim discusses the creation of the underlying musical composition. The registration included with the claim does not include the musical work; however, the facts included with the claim indicate the musical composition is a joint work as well. Although it is not clear if you are bringing a claim involving the musical composition, it appears that the respondent is the co-owner of the copyright in the musical composition and cannot be liable for a claim of copyright infringement of the musical work. Information about joint ownership of a copyright is available at pages 9-10 of the Responding to an Infringement Claim chapter of the CCB Handbook.

If the information you have given regarding the co-ownership of your alleged work is incorrect, you should correct that information if you file an amended claim. However, if the respondent is a co-owner of the copyright, you cannot raise an infringement claim against them before the Board. Joint owners generally must share any income they receive from their use and licensing of the work with the other owners, but a claim about failing to make such payments is called an “accounting” claim, which is not a claim that the Board can hear.

To submit an amended claim, log into your eCCB account and take the following steps:

1. From your dashboard, click the “Amend claim” button and select your docket number from the dropdown list.
2. Your claim will unlock for editing. The information you originally entered will appear in the same order as in your original claim.
3. Make the necessary edits. If you have filed supplemental documents, you must re-upload any documents you wish to include in the amended claim on the “Documentation” page. Please include only documents directly related to your claim, and label them clearly.
4. Once you have completed your edits, continue to click through the fillable claim form until you reach the “Review” page. The Review page includes all the information that you have provided in the claim up to this point. Carefully double-check the information on this page. Once you submit your amended claim, you will be unable to edit the claim while it is in compliance review.
